

Harris Ligon

Harris Ligon is the co-founder and CEO of Telegraph. Prior to launching Telegraph, he spent nearly 15 years in surface transportation at Uber Freight, Norfolk Southern, and BNSF Railway. During this time, he led teams in operations, strategy, business development, and product development. Harris holds a bachelor's degree from The Citadel, and a MBA from The College of William & Mary.

Telegraph

Telegraph is a software company that revolutionizes the way businesses interact with railroads, providing modern solutions for shippers, logistics companies, leasing companies, and ports + terminals. Our platform creates efficiency across the value chain from pricing and visibility, to business intelligence and payments. We make working with railroads simple, clear, and automated.
