

Chris Baltimore edits Argus Media's Petroleum Transportation North America report, based in Houston. The report is an essential subscription for anyone that has exposure to transportation costs in North American crude, refined products, natural gas liquids (NGLs) and ethanol. This weekly publication provides a dynamic and transparent reflection of the evolving internal infrastructure for barge, pipeline, rail and waterborne transportation of petroleum. Chris has more than a decade of experience in reporting on energy markets. Before joining Argus in January 2012, Chris was Houston Bureau Chief for Reuters, where he oversaw major stories like the Deepwater Horizon spill, multiple hurricanes, and NASA's final series of space shuttle flights. Chris covered energy policy for Reuters in Washington, and previously covered energy markets and issues for Platts, Hart Energy, and The Oil Daily. Chris has a BA in English Literature/American Studies from the University of Virginia.