

Leah Shaver is the President & CEO of The National Transportation Institute (NTI), the trucking industry subject matter experts on professional driver wages, best practices, and programs and in 2019 joined the lineup of Talk Radio Hosts on SiriusXM's Road Dog Trucking Radio. Recognized as a Top Woman to Watch in Transportation, Leah is a subject matter expert on driver compensation and strategies addressing driver recruiting, retention and development of the driver candidate pool.

Leah's career has been spent supporting long-term growth and expansion of the transportation industry while reinforcing its best resource – professional truck drivers! Today, with Leah's leadership, NTI works to deliver opportunities for companies that employ professional drivers to grow, to attract additional workers, and then expand in their marketplace with that appropriately compensated, engaged and retained workforce. Tagged the "Sunshine Girl" by SiriusXM listeners, whether on-air with professional drivers or consulting in the boardroom at fleets of all sizes, Leah offers encouraging guidance with an upbeat, and direct manner focused on top performance, career growth and retention.

Philanthropy is vital to rounding out Leah's efforts in the trucking industry. NTI donates a portion of all revenue generated to non-profit causes that support professional drivers and foster children in the US. In addition to owning and operating NTI and contributing on-air at SiriusXM, Leah serves on the Board of Directors of The Next Generation in Trucking Association, served six years as an officer on the Board of Directors of the Women In Trucking Association, as a mentor to other trucking professionals, on a variety of advisory boards and volunteers as a licensed foster care advocate in her community.
